

Bar Raised in BC Construction Sector

Builders can improve homebuyer confidence

VANCOUVER, Feb. 9 /CNW/ - At the 2006 Buildex conference in Vancouver today, CONASYS Consumer Assurance Systems announced the launching of a new progressive service program called The Warranty Resource. The program is aimed at assisting the construction industry with the management of warranty and after sales service issues with the goal of improving customer service and confidence. The program follows the lead of the industry and the government, that have been driving for improved after sales service levels and consumer confidence since the leaky condo crisis in BC.

The Warranty Resource acts as an information management database benefiting new homeowners, developers, and insurance companies by electronically collecting and collating all obtainable and applicable manufacturers warranty cards, maintenance information, contact information and other pertinent items on a custom per home basis. These items are then packaged and presented by the builder to the owner, enabling them to register each warranty.

"We set out to develop technology tools that will allow all stakeholders, meaning builders, owners, insurers, Government agencies, suppliers and manufacturers real time and consistent access to this data," company President Greg Stolz stated. "This will provide consumers and builders fast, efficient, and very cost effective product/workmanship deficiency resolution."

The core product is sold as a residence specific Warranty Resource homeowner package that includes a hardcopy version and password access to a virtual copy, which will be available through WarrantyResource.com. The company will also offer an on-going, after sales, follow up service to assist home owners and builders over the entire builders' company specific warranty coverage.

"We believe builders are very interested in guaranteeing their work and providing applicable product documentation but with an average of over 75 manufactured products per home there can be a fair amount of data to manage," said James Christensen, CEO of CONASYS. "Warranty Resource will make it easy and effective for builders while consumers, insurance providers, and regulatory agency's will also benefit. It is a win-win for all."

CONASYS Consumer Assurance Systems Inc. is an information management company providing data management tools that assist companies and consumers with warranty and after sales service. It is a private company is based in Vancouver, B.C.

Conasys Inc. – Home Information Packages Contact:

James Christensen, CEO

Phone: 604 988 0690

Toll Free: 1 877 744 7547

Email: j.christensen@conasysinc.com

www.homeinformationpackages.com